

Tournament House – Extension to Hilton London Paddington

London, England

Tournament House - the conversion of a 1930's listed office block into 56 luxury guestrooms as an annexe to the existing Hotel with a dedicated Executive Lounge and checking-in facilities.

HotelAdvice had significant involvement in this whole project on a number of levels until completion of the conversion of Tournament House. The building lies between the existing Hilton London Paddington Hotel and Paddington Station. The new room product was designed to emphasise exclusivity.

The use of finishes and materials has been carefully considered and the new wing and Executive Lounge have been named to further enhance the feeling of luxury.

The external envelope is Grade I Listed and therefore existing fenestration patterns could not be altered. By spatially divorcing the lobby and bathroom from the body of the room, we have been able to create some 56 new guest bedrooms. Externally, the building has a strong 30's style, as does the existing Hotel, and this has inspired the interior design.

All the interiors have been carried out by our in-house interior designer. The scheme was designed to generate a residential feel with freestanding desks, feature credenza/bar units and defined entrance areas to create a 'timeless' appearance.

HotelAdvice has for years provided consultancy and advisory services to the owners of Hilton Paddington including Asset Management, Sales & Marketing advise, Consultancy advice on refurbishments, extensions of top floors and lately the above mentioned Tournament House project from start to finish.
